According to the Hindu view, there are four goals of life on earth, and each human being should aspire to all four. Everyone should aim for dharma, or righteous living; artha, or wealth acquired through the pursuit of a profession; kama, or human and sexual love; and, finally, moksha, or spiritual salvation.. This holistic view is reflected

Introduction. In traditional Hindu society, the successful attainment of sixteen samskaras is considered of paramount importance in the course of one's natural human life. According to the celebrated Hindu thinker Manu, the Vivaha Samskara is one of the most essential ones. According to Manu, marriage completes a man as an individual and perhaps this is why a wife is described as the other-half of a man.
