The Floating Book by Michelle Lovric

A sensuous story of the personal and business tribulations of a German trying to introduce printing to fifteenth century Venice, and of his Venetian wife. They have to deal with the full range of human types, all of whom seem to be unconsciously influenced by the life and poems of Catullus - the poet at the centre of the printer's efforts. All of the senses are conjured up in the descriptions ...

Set in 1782 in Venice Lovric captures all the sounds, smells and life of a decadent, sensual, pleasure seeking city. Beginning when Cecilia is just 13 years and seduced by Casanova through to her visit to Albania to paint the Pasha and meeting Byron, her prose and descriptions come to life in your mind. However I do think the book a little long.
